Marijuana advocates want Tom Wolf's ear

Philadelphia. A local pair of marijuana lobbyists want governor-elect Wolf to remember his promise.

The most prominent Philadelphia marijuana lobby consists of two men: a veteran with post-traumatic stress disorder and a Northern Liberties bartender.

The two men, who helped push for marijuana decriminalization in the largest city in the country, have now set their sights on the governor-elect and statewide legalization.

During his successful campaign to unseat Gov. Tom Corbett, Tom Wolf offered his vocal support for marijuana's decriminalization and medicinal use. And the local pair wants Wolf to know that his supporters won't let him forget.

"The marijuana lobby in Philadelphia wants Tom Wolf to know that we're broke, but resilient," said N.A. Poe, who moonlights as a bartender, but who also ran for a seat on City Council riding the marijuana issue.

"We're not going anywhere," Poe added, "and we're going to stick to our guns. And if he's going to say he's going to work on decriminalizing marijuana, we're going to hold him to it."

His fellow crusader, former Marine Mike Whiter, has consistently claimed marijuana has helped him battle his issues with PTSD. Whiter, who was also, as Metro reported, the first person cited for public marijuana use in Philadelphia, said he's skeptical of the businessman from York.

"Here is my stance on Tom Wolf," Whiter said. "He's another politician saying things that people want to hear — things that the marijuana lobby especially wants to hear. So I'm skeptical. But I'm going to keep fighting as hard as I've been fighting, because he needs to see this."

Erik Altieri, communications director for the national pro-pot outfit NORML, said Gov. Corbett, a former prosecutor, had long been a staunch opponent of legalizing marijuana, for either medical or recreational use.

"He had threatened to veto any bills we managed to get through the legislature," Altieri said, "whereas Tom Wolf from the primaries came out very clearly in support for at least the decriminalization of personal possession, as well as allowing the medical use of marijuana. … And we fully expect a push on those two fronts when he takes office in January."

Quoted

"It would be naive of us to think that with all of the problems that we have in Pennsylvania, that he's going to sit down at his desk and say, 'We need to decriminalize marijuana statewide and make medical marijuana available right now,' but it's our job to really push the idea." Poe

BEEN INJURED?

AUTO ACCIDENTS • SEPTA ACCIDENTS • MEDICAL MALPRACTICE

Did You Know?

BIG BROTHER IS WATCHING.

Traffic and security/surveillance cameras are almost everywhere. If you are riding on SEPTA, there is a video of you reading this advertisement. If you are in a car accident or you fall, it is probable that it was captured on video.

Yes… there are videos at traffic lights. Yes… there are videos in stores. Many stores also capture video of nearby streets and sidewalks.

However, most cameras recycle video. Within a few days or weeks, video can be recorded-over.

If you're in an accident, take notice of any cameras nearby. Then, call us so we can secure the footage that may be evidence.

It could make all the difference in proving your case.

Soccer star's goal: 'Break the silence' on domestic violence

Philly. Jillian Loyden has both motive and means to raise awareness.

Jillian Loyden is on the cover of her foundation's book, handed to guests at the gala. / JUSTIN WALTERS

Former soccer star Jillian Loyden has a new job: leading a foundation against domestic violence, which held its second annual "Break the Silence" gala on Saturday in Philly.

For Loyden, 29, of South Jersey, the cause is personal. In 2012, her younger sister Britton Loyden was murdered by an ex-boyfriend.

"I'm still living in the wake of what it's done to my family," Loyden said. "It stirred up a cause in me, where I was like, 'No one else should ever have to go through this.'"

Loyden, formerly goalie with the U.S. Women's National Team, retired a month ago to focus on her foundation and work as a soccer coach.

Loyden said she realized that by sharing her story, she could help others overcome the "taboo" of discussing domestic violence.

That became clear when a woman came up to her and embraced her after a soccer game last year.

"She said, 'Jill, you saved my life,'" Loyden said. "I realized this was way more important than anything I ever could do on the field."

The Jillian Loyden Foundation presented two scholarships during the gala and is fundraising to support domestic violence education programs for youths.

JOE CASEY

SEPTA GENERAL MANAGER

Send your questions about SEPTA services and other issues about the transit agency to christina.paciolla@metro.us. They will be forwarded to Joe Casey who will answer them in a special monthly column here.

EMERGENCY BUTTON DIDN'T WORK

Today on the El I had a very bad experience. Two boys, around 17 years old, came running through the two El cars and threatened a boy about 14 years of age. They started to hit him when he ran into the next car. I pushed the button for help many times and got no reply. When we got to 69th Street, I ran up to the transit police office and told an officer who ran down to try and find them. How safe is the El if the emergency button does nothing?

When you engaged the intercom button to alert the operator, you should have received a response at the very next station stop. The operator is required to answer the call after the train is brought to a complete stop and investigate the problem. In your question, it is unclear whether 69th Street was the next stop or if the intercom button was pushed prior to Millbourne. It is regrettable that you and the other passengers had to witness the unfortunate incident you described. SEPTA has increased the presence of transit officers riding our subway and elevated trains and installed thousands of surveillance cameras in our vehicles and stations. Officers are not on every train, but they will intercept the train to address a situation like the one you described. Fortunately such incidents are rare. Please note that, in addition to pressing the intercom button, we also encourage our riders to dial 215-580-8111 for safety or security concerns.

Why is Septa Train 9703 to Trenton always late? I work in NYC and live in Bristol. When I started working there in 2012, I usually arrived at Penn Station at about 8 a.m. Now, it always misses the 6:46 New Jersey Transit and I arrive at work at about 8:25. All I ask it that it be on time, within two or three minutes of the printed schedule.

SEPTA's On Time Performance Committee is currently evaluating Train 9703's schedule and performance to determine if adjustments can be made, including changing arrival time, without creating additional conflicts or delays to other trains. We realize how important our Trenton Connection is for our customers. Unfortunately, since 2012 we've had to make some scheduling adjustments due to increased traffic on Amtrak's right-of-way. SEPTA's Service Planning and Operations staff work closely with their counterparts at NJT and Amtrak to make the connecting services as convenient and reliable as possible, with transfer periods of 8-10 minutes being the "general" target range. Train 9703 is popular and operates during a congested time period when Amtrak, SEPTA and NJT all have high travel demand. Small deviations in schedule can cause Amtrak dispatchers to experience a ripple effect that affects several trains. This is why, for now, SEPTA's schedule promotes the NJT train that departs at 6:57 a.m. as the train connecting customers traveling to NYC should plan to use, instead of the NJT train that departs for NYC at 6:46 a.m. — four minutes after 9703 is scheduled to pull into Trenton.

SEPTEMBER SAFETY TIPS:

The back-to-school season is a time that can be stressful for both parents and students. Aside from the obvious, back to school comes with new traffic patterns and added hazards to the roadways. Here are some tips to remember:

- Exercise extra caution as sun glare can be a factor during these times
- Come to a complete stop at a safe distance from a bus when the red lights are flashing and the stop sign arm is extended - this indicates the bus is stopped and children are getting off the bus
- Never pass a stopped school bus - it is illegal in all 50 states

Islamic State kills American relief worker

This screen grab is taken from a video showing Peter Kassig and an ISIS member. / YOUTUBE

Video. A clip shows a masked man with a decapitated head covered in blood at his feet.

Islamic State militants have beheaded another American hostage, Peter Kassig, issuing a video claiming the killing on Sunday and warning the United States they would kill other U.S. citizens "on your streets."

President Barack Obama confirmed the death of the aid worker in what he called "an act of pure evil by a terrorist group that the world rightly associates with inhumanity."

The announcement of Kassig's death, the fifth such killing of a Western captive by the group, formed part of a 15-minute video posted online in which Islamic State showed the beheadings of at least 14 men it said were pilots and officers loyal to Syrian President Bashar al-Assad.

Beheaded Americans

Peter Kassig was the third American beheaded by the Islamic State.

Quoted

"We prefer our son is ... remembered for his important work and the love he shared with friends and family, not in the manner the hostage-takers would use to manipulate Americans and further their cause."

Parents, Ed and Paula Kassig

Kassig, 26, from Indiana, was also known as Abdul-Rahman, a name he took after converting to Islam in captivity. His parents have said through a spokesperson that their son was taken captive on his way to the Syrian city of Deir al-Zor on Oct. 1, 2013.

"Today we offer our prayers and condolences to the parents and family of Abdul-Rahman Kassig, also known to us as Peter," Obama said in a statement to reporters on Air Force One as he returned to the United States from the G20 summit in Brisbane, Australia.

The video appeared on a jihadist website and on Twitter feeds used by Islamic State. REUTERS

Man in video

- The man in the video spoke with the same southern British accent as the killer of previous hostages, and has been dubbed "Jihadi John" by British media.
- He was believed to have been wounded in an air attack on an ISIS leaders' meeting in Iraq near the Syrian border earlier this month, some media reports have said.

Anbar province

US military already advising Iraqis

American forces have begun advising Iraqi troops in western Anbar province, the top U.S. general told Reuters, in a faster-than-expected expansion of an operation that is central to its campaign against Islamic State.

"We have a train, advise and assist team in al-Asad air base," General Martin Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said in an interview. "There's enough there that are already working with the seventh division to help them plan and help them understand the threat, to advise them on how to consolidate their forces."

Dempsey said a small group of advisers had already established themselves at Ain al-Asad air base in the province, much of which is controlled by the militant Islamist group.

The Americans would also eventually start training the Iraqi army's seventh division, which suffered major setbacks during the Islamic State's advances across the country this summer. REUTERS

More troops

1,500

The Obama administration announced on Nov. 7 it would send up to 1,500 more U.S. troops to Iraq, widening its advising mission and initiating training of Baghdad's forces. At the time, officials suggested the expansion would take weeks to get underway.

GOP mulls shutdown to block Obama on immigration decrees

Obama plans to issue executive orders to prevent the deportation of undocumented immigrants with children born in the United States. / GETTY IMAGES

Discord. Obama expected to announce executive actions on immigration by the year's end.

Republican Sen. John Thune on Sunday held open the possibility that his party could move to shut down the government in an attempt to stop President Barack Obama from taking executive action on immigration policy.

A vocal group of conservatives in the House of Representatives is pressing to use government funding as leverage to prevent any White House moves that would allow millions of undocumented immigrants to stay and work in the United States.

Several Republicans, including some in leadership, have said they were trying to find alternatives that would stop short of directly threatening a government shutdown, and Republican lawmakers on Sunday talk shows acknowledged that the shutdown threat was not an ideal approach.

"It doesn't solve the problem. But look, we're having those discussions. ... We're going to continue to meet about this. I know the House leaders are talking about [it], the Senate leaders are talking about it," said South Dakota's Thune, who chairs the Senate Republican Conference, on "Fox News Sunday."

"Republicans are looking at different options about how best to respond to the president's unilateral action, which many people believe is unconstitutional, unlawful action on this particular issue," Thune said.

Thune and Republican Rep. Tom Cole said Obama's expected use of executive power on the issue was what fueled partisanship and lack of cooperation. REUTERS

Obamacare

Obama defends health care law

President Barack Obama defended the transparency of the Affordable Care Act after one of the White House's advisers on the reform said the law passed, in part, because of the "stupidity" of American voters.

Obama said the law was extensively analyzed and written about before its passage in 2010, and in subsequent debates.

"The fact that some adviser who never worked on our staff expressed an opinion that I completely disagree with ... is no reflection on the actual process that was run," Obama said during a press conference at the Group of 20 leaders meeting in Brisbane, Australia.

"I would just advise every press outlet here, go back and pull up every clip, every story. ... It was a tough debate."

Obama was responding to the comments of Jonathan Gruber, a health economist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. REUTERS

Investor concerns

Poll: World economy worst in two years

The world economy is in its worst shape in two years, with the euro region and emerging markets deteriorating, and the danger of deflation rising, according to a Bloomberg Global Poll of international investors.

A plurality of 38 percent of those surveyed this week described the global economy as worsening, more than double the number who said that in the last poll in July and the most since September 2012, when Europe was mired in a recession.

Much of the concern is again focused on the euro area: Almost two-thirds of those polled said its economy was weakening, while 89 percent saw disinflation or deflation as a greater threat there than inflation over the next year. BLOOMBERG

G20. Leaders vow to fight climate change, grow world economy

Leaders from the G20 group of nations agreed on Sunday to boost flagging global growth, tackle climate change and crack down on tax avoidance, even as ties between the West and Russia plummeted to a new low over the crisis in Ukraine.

Russian President Vladimir Putin left the G20 summit in Brisbane early as President Barack Obama accused Russia of invading Ukraine and Britain warned of a possible "frozen conflict" in Europe.

Several Western nations threatened further sanctions if Russia did not withdraw troops and weapons from Ukraine.

"There is a cost to sanctions, but there would be a far greater cost in allowing a frozen conflict on the continent of Europe to be created and maintained," said British Prime Minister David Cameron.

Russia's President Vladimir Putin departs Brisbane Airport. GETTY IMAGES

Security and climate change overshadowed G20 talks on boosting global economic growth at the summit, although the leaders did sign off on a package of measures to add an extra 2.1 percentage points to global growth over five years.

"This will add more than $2 trillion to the global economy and create millions of jobs," said a communique issued at the end of the meeting. REUTERS

$1 billion divorce

Why Harold Hamm's ex-wife didn't win more

Oklahoma divorce judge Howard Haralson awarded Sue Ann Hamm just 6 percent of the $18 billion fortune her lawyers say the couple had amassed at the start of the divorce trial in August.

Harold Hamm called the judgment "fair and equitable," but his ex-wife called it unfair and plans to appeal.

Several divorce lawyers said they were surprised by how small the award was. REUTERS

'I Love Ferguson' signs and T-shirts lift morale

Fundraising tool. Sales of "I Love Ferguson" merchandise are intended to help damaged businesses.

The group has placed more than 9,000 lawn signs and sold thousands of T-shirts, Fletcher said. / GETTY IMAGES

The streets of Ferguson, Missouri, bear two hallmarks of the months of sometimes violent protests that followed the August police shooting of an unarmed black teenager by a white police officer.

One is boarded-up shop windows, the other, ever-present "I Love Ferguson" signs, T-shirts and stickers.

The signs were dreamed up by the city's former mayor, Brian Fletcher, 55, a week after the Aug. 9 death of Michael Brown provoked rioting in which businesses were burned out.

An "I Love Ferguson" store opened late last month, just down the street from the local police department that has been the site of repeated demonstrations.

If not under siege, the St. Louis suburb is clearly on edge as residents await word on whether the grand jury reviewing Brown's death will bring criminal charges against the police officer who shot him, Darren Wilson.

Fletcher has set up a certified nonprofit corporation to handle funds raised by selling the T-shirts and signs. So far it has donated $15,000 to a local redevelopment company, which has in turn paid it out as grants to 23 businesses damaged in the riots, he said. REUTERS

"The way Ferguson is being portrayed is unfair and inaccurate. It looks like we are under siege, like we are Beirut or something, and it's not like that." Fletcher

Navy SEAL opens up about bagging Osama bin Laden

Boston. We spoke with Robert O'Neill about his career as a Navy SEAL — oh, and baseball. Read the full story at Metro.us.

O'Neill / COURTESY OF ROBERT O'NEILL

It was fall in 2004, and the man who would years later become known as the guy who shot Osama bin Laden was going through the rigorous selection process for Navy SEAL Team Six near Washington, D.C.

Team Six is considered to be an elite, top-tier counterterrorism unit, and the selection process weeds out many SEALs. So Robert O'Neill's days were consumed with challenges both mentally and physically draining. And his nights? They were filled with Red Sox baseball.

"The training was so hard, and the only thing I looked forward to was getting through the day so I could watch the Red Sox play," said O'Neill, who is now retired from the SEALs. "That's really how I was introduced to baseball, because I wasn't a big baseball fan growing up."

O'Neill, a Montana native, would make it on to Team Six, and the Sox would win their first World Series in 86 years, coming back from an 0-3 hole against their nemesis, the New York Yankees, to win the American League pennant before sweeping the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I remember the way that Big Papi stepped up and he was just the guy," said O'Neill. "Obviously that's what he does for a living — he's the guy. I remember being really impressed with him and how he could perform night after night."

O'Neill, who recently publicized his role in the killing of bin Laden, saying he shot the extremist during a raid in Abbottabad, Pakistan, acknowledged his fandom "is going to sound like some bandwagon jumping." Call him a "pink hat" at your own risk, though.

Climate change may fuel more lightning

Danger. Lightning kills dozens of Americans annually, and the risk is expected to rise.

Many experts blame weather intensity in recent years on global climate change they attribute to human activities. / GETTY IMAGES

Rising global temperatures may cause a big jolt in the number of lightning strikes in the United States over the rest of the 21st century, in the latest example of extreme weather spawned by climate change, scientists say.

A predicted 50 percent rise in lightning strikes could lead to more wildfires, because lightning already triggers half of these blazes in the United States, the researchers said.

Considering factors including precipitation levels, cloud buoyancy and warming air, the scientists predicted a 7 percent increase in the number of lightning strikes with each degree Fahrenheit global average temperature increase (12 percent for each degree Celsius).

"There are about 30 million strikes per year in the contiguous U.S. now. So, in 2100, we would expect about 45 million per year," said climate scientist David Romps of the University of California, Berkeley and the U.S. government's Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory, who led the study published in the journal Science.

Increase

Lightning strikes will increase by about 50 percent by 2100 in the contiguous United States, because thunderstorms will become more explosive in the coming decades thanks to a warming planet.

"For every two lightning strikes in 2000, there will be three lightning strikes in 2100," Romps added.

The researchers said rising temperatures breed lightning because the amount of water vapor in the atmosphere — the fuel for thunderstorms — increases exponentially as the air gets warmer.

"As the planet warms, there will be more of this fuel lying around, so when thunderstorms get triggered, they will be more energetic. This increase in thunderstorm energy is the primary reason for the projected increase in lightning strikes," Romps said.

"We are pushing our climate system into uncharted territory." said University of California, Berkeley climate researcher Jacob Seeley. REUTERS

1 Taylor Swift contemplates a real cold play

She wishes. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

All of the year's gossip stories appear to be converging — and just in time for the holidays! Think of it as the Celebrity Singularity. The latest evidence? This Star magazine story that Taylor Swift — despite recent protests that she's so over the concept of dating — has set her sights on Coldplay frontman and Gwyneth Paltrow ex, Chris Martin, despite his on-again, off-again relationship with Jennifer Lawrence. "Taylor would love to make Chris her new boyfriend," a source tells the magazine. Wow, that sounds like some conscious coupling there, eh? "She's taking advantage of how Jen's and Chris' busy schedules are keeping them apart." All we need is a tag-team response from Blake Lively and Martha Stewart, and we're set. In all seriousness, why is Chris Martin suddenly the hottest thing in Hollywood since sliced Clooney?

2 Amanda Bynes burning a Paris bridge

They were OK with sitting together back in 2009, but something's come between them.

Amanda Bynes appears to be burning bridges left and right. First it was her parents, now it's Paris Hilton. The troubled former Nickelodeon star reportedly had a run-in with Hilton and pal Brandon Davis at an L.A. nightclub recently, according to Page Six. "Amanda tried to sit at Paris and Brandon's table, and they were not happy about it," a source says. "There was a scene, and words were exchanged before they kicked her out of their area." Oh, words were exchanged? My, I do hope some pearls were clutched as well!

3 Alfonso Ribeiro: Dancing with the (fallen) stars?

Alfonso Ribeiro has been the biggest hit of this season's "Dancing with the Stars," but is the show going to have to make do without him? E! News confirms that the former "Fresh Prince of Bel Air" star suffered another injury during rehearsals last week, and it's unclear if he'll perform tonight. "I'm doing everything I can just to maintain and try to keep going," he said after last week's show.

Will Alfonso dance tonight?

Daily video

Band Aid 30

This weekend saw the debut of Band Aid 30's "Do They Know It's Christmas," the updated holiday song you'll be hearing hundreds of times this season into the new year. While it's hard to know how our feelings will change over these myriad listens, upon first experiencing the song in its new format — now including lyrics about Ebola, and featuring current stars — it feels, well, weird. But in the end, it's still the same thing; a bunch of European pop stars, raising money for a good cause, but coming across a little bit culturally insensitive. At least this time, Bono doesn't sing that frequently misinterpreted "tonight thank God it's them" line. As of press time the video had been yanked offline, but it will likely resurface soon.

BONO IS NOT AS OFFENSIVE THIS TIME AROUND.

Returning to roles as they get older (but not necessarily wiser)

Sequels. They thought they were out, but someone brought them back in: Jim Carrey and Jeff Daniels spent two decades away from their "Dumb and Dumber" doofuses. But fate — or the promise of lots of money — meant it was time for a long-awaited sequel. They're not alone. Here's a look at some of the most interesting callbacks that Hollywood has ever attempted, with varying results.

MATT PRIGGE

30 years

Jack Lemmon & Walter Matthau

Characters: Felix Ungar & Oscar Madison
Film: "The Odd Couple II" (1998)
Previous installment: "The Odd Couple" (1968)

Lemmon and Matthau weren't the only Felix and Oscar. The Broadway hit-turned-movie became a hit on TV, with Tony Randall and Jack Klugman. After Lemmon and Matthau scored with "Grumpy Old Men," they dusted off their old roles.

28 years

Jeff Bridges

Character: Kevin Flynn
Film: "Tron: Legacy" (2010)
Previous installment: "Tron" (1982)

"Tron" amassed a cult big enough for Disney to try again 28 years later, which meant Jeff Bridges' feisty computer programmer was now in his 60s. The sequel pits him against an evil, digitally preserved version of his younger self.

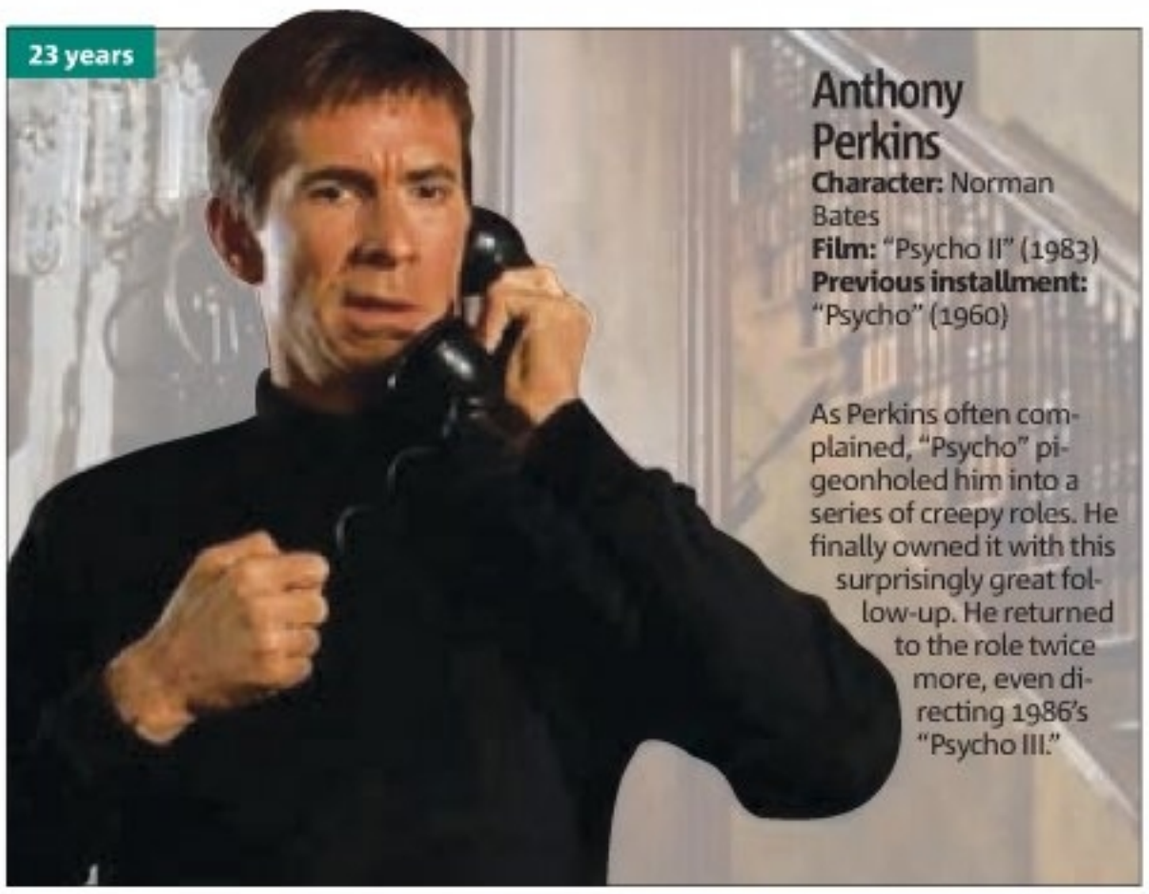
25 years

Paul Newman

Character: Eddie Felson
Film: "The Color of Money" (1986)
Previous installment: "The Hustler" (1961)

Classics don't often get sequels, yet Newman's pool shark returned, under the direction of no less than Martin Scorsese, and teamed with an immediately post-"Top Gun" Tom Cruise. Newman won his Oscar for this film.

23 years



Anthony Perkins

Character: Norman Bates
Film: "Psycho II" (1983)
Previous installment: "Psycho" (1960)

As Perkins often complained, "Psycho" pigeonholed him into a series of creepy roles. He finally owned it with this surprisingly great follow-up. He returned to the role twice more, even directing 1986's "Psycho III."

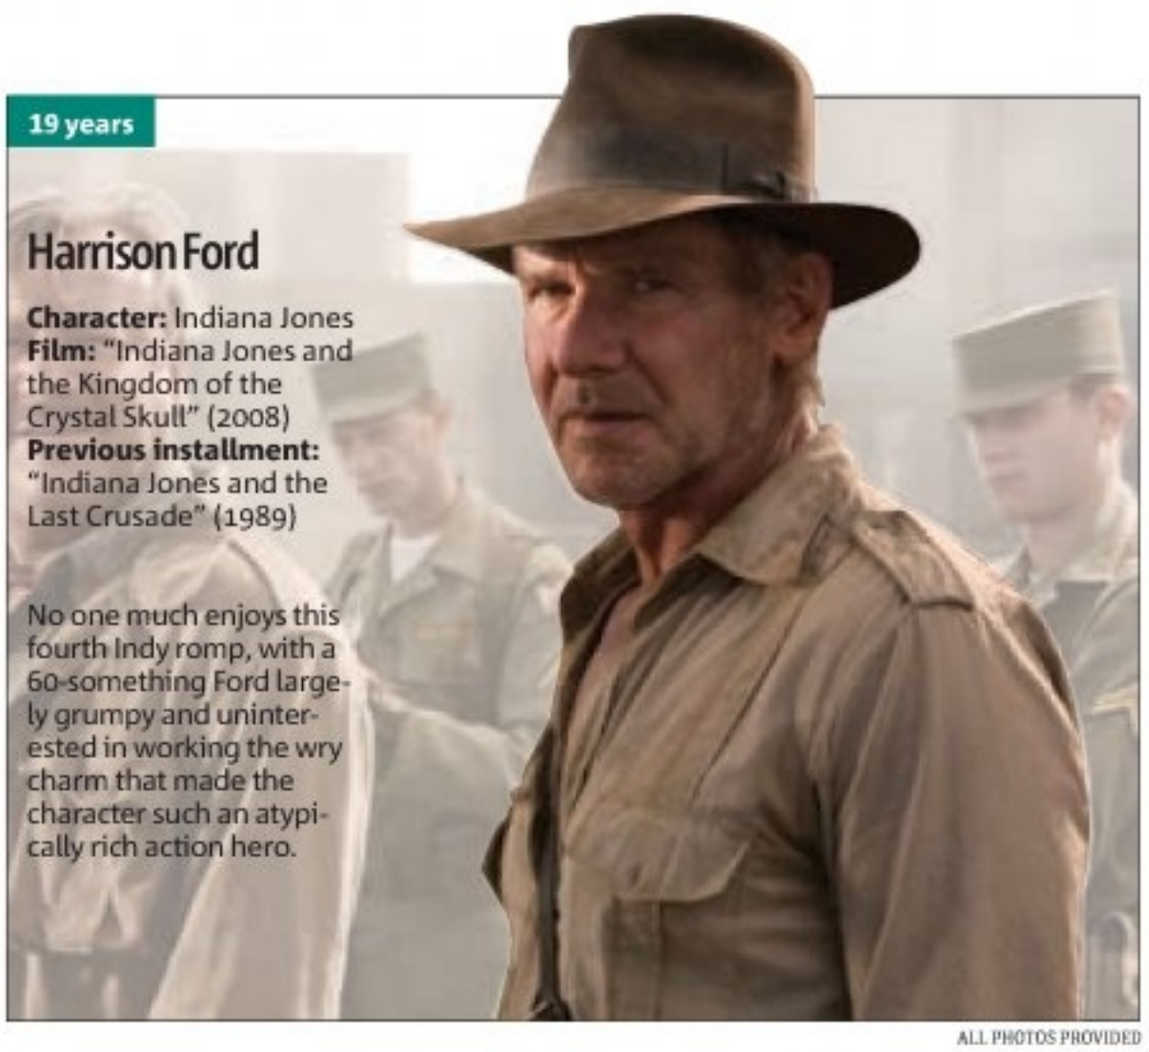
20 years

Sylvester Stallone

Character: John Rambo
Film: "Rambo" (2008)
Previous installment: "Rambo III" (1988)

After the semi-surprise success of "Rocky Balboa" (done a "mere" 16 years after "Rocky V"), Sly dusted off John Rambo, too. Here, he's the mumbly savior of Burmese peasants, killing villains in ways more grisly than before.

19 years



Harrison Ford

Character: Indiana Jones
Film: "Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull" (2008)
Previous installment: "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" (1989)

No one much enjoys this fourth Indy romp, with a 60-something Ford largely grumpy and uninterested in working the wry charm that made the character such an atypically rich action hero.

Q&A JOHN HAWKES ON PIANO

GETTY IMAGES

Interview. The Oscar nominee had to play both a musician and a heroin addict in "Low Down."

John Hawkes didn't know of pianist Joe Albany — one of the few white jazz musicians to play with Charlie Parker, and a heroin addict — until he played him in "Low Down," a portrait of him through the eyes of his daughter, Amy-Jo (Elle Fanning). It turns out that even being a musician doesn't make bebop easy to master.

John Hawkes plays bebop pianist Joe Albany in "Low Down," in theaters now. / OSCILLOSCOPE LABORATORIES

As a musician, was the music the main draw for doing this project?
The jazz wasn't what brought me in. It made me nervous more than anything. Because the music, I didn't feel like I had a real handle on. I've always loved Louis Armstrong and Thelonious Monk, but I never really had immersed myself in that. It wasn't the pull, it was the liability — the idea that I could somehow embody a kind of music that isn't naturally in my body. [Bebop] is a different form, one I grew to really love.

How was the transition into doing bebop?
Bebop is a really difficult form of music, to my mind. It's meant to be. It's meant to take jazz back from those who had jumped on the bandwagon. I was reading stories of quartets suddenly dealing with 11 or 12 players hanging out on the stage by the end of a set. People would just jump up uninvited. In a way, bebop separated the wheat from the chaff. I was quite confused and challenged by that form of music. After the movie I went back to the forms of music I love and they all sounded really simple. [Laughs]

There's been a greater understanding lately that drug addiction can be beyond addicts' control.
The way Amy described it, she felt her father's moods were like the tides at sea. Sometimes it seemed beyond his control. Joe had an incredibly difficult upbringing. ... He'd been diagnosed with a form of schizophrenia early on. The treatments were often brutish and cruel. He ended up in prison early on and was traumatized horribly. That affected him his whole life. I don't really like the idea of people blaming their a—hole behavior on something outside themselves, but for him it seemed to reach beyond drug addition into a form of mental illness.

On Fanning

Acting up

You spend a lot of screen time acting with Elle Fanning, who always seems both beyond her years and her age.
I'd been an admirer of her work for several years — which is funny to say about someone who was 15 at the time. But it's true. I learn from everybody I work with, and she was no exception. When you come across someone like her, it's almost like age disappears. She's a 15-year-old person I could talk to for hours and not be bored by.

Box office. A 'Dumber' film beat 'Big Hero 6' and 'Interstellar'

"Dumb and Dumber To," the sequel to the 1994 comedy that raised stupidity to an art form, led the North American box office this weekend, taking in $38.1 million and out-muscling last week's winner, "Big Hero 6."

"Dumb and Dumber To" stars Jim Carrey and Jeff Daniels as dimwitted friends searching for the long-lost daughter of one of the buddies. The original film, "Dumb and Dumber," was among 1994's biggest hits, with $127.2 million in domestic ticket sales.

"We felt it was going to do over $30 million, but this is bordering on $40 million," said Nikki Rocco, president for domestic distribution at Universal Pictures, the Comcast Corp. unit that released the film. "The timing was right for a comedy of this nature, one with broad appeal," Rocco added, noting the studio successfully broadened the film's appeal to ethnic audiences, with Hispanics making up 38 percent of ticket buyers.

Top 5 earners

1. 'Dumb and Dumber To' $38.1 million
2. 'Big Hero 6' $36 million
3. 'Interstellar' $29.2 million
4. 'Beyond the Lights' $6.5 million
5. 'Gone Girl' $4.6 million

"Big Hero 6," Walt Disney Co.'s animated story of a boy and his robot, settled for a close second with $36 million. Director Christopher Nolan's space adventure "Interstellar" collected $29.2 million for third place, while new release "Beyond the Lights," the story of a pop star struggling with the pressures of fame who falls in love with a policeman, took fourth place. A 'Gran' tour of Orson Welles

BalletX will perform guest choreographer Jorma Elo's "Gran Partita" as part of the company's Fall Series, Nov. 19-23 at the Wilma Theater (265 S. Broad St.). Tickets are $35 to $40 at www.balletx.org. / ALEXANDER IZILIAEV

Premiere. Jorma Elo choreographs a dark, moody dance inspired by "Touch of Evil."

Intended to be a quickie crime thriller and on-the-cheap Charlton Heston vehicle, "Touch of Evil" was transformed into a film noir classic through Orson Welles' direction and oversized co-starring role. Count among its many admirers Finnish choreographer Jorma Elo, who had already created a ballet inspired by the 1958 film when he decided to draw on it again for a new piece for BalletX.

"I was always fascinated by the extreme moods and the extreme lighting of the film. It always stuck with me," Elo said over Skype from his home in Holland, where he was busy selecting music for an upcoming interpretation of "Alice in Wonderland" for the Finnish National Ballet.

Elo's "Gran Partita," named for the Mozart piece, will have its world premiere this month during BalletX's Fall Series, which will also feature Brussels-born choreographer Olivier Wevers' "Instantly Bound" as well as "Increasing," a new work by company co-founder Matthew Neenan.

In the case of "Gran Partita," Elo said that "Touch of Evil" led him unexpectedly to the music of composer Alban Berg. "I think Berg has a lot of the same moods as 'Touch of Evil,'" he explained. "His music has claustrophobia, it has strong moments of cutting the space, cutting the dancer's movements. Then I have contrasting worlds with the beautiful music of Bach, Mozart and Monteverdi."

Ultimately, those inspirations led him further from his Wellesian source material than his earlier variation on the same theme, "Double Evil," and all that remains of "Touch of Evil" in "Gran Partita" are those dark moods.

Such straying from an initial impulse is key to the way he makes dance, Elo said: "I collect all these fragments of inspiration when I start a piece, and then if I feel like I lock into one idea stronger than another then I go with that. I work together with the dancers, so I have nothing really solidly prepared before I start the work and often it takes a path that is kind of surprising to me."

As the mood strikes him

Elo's improvisational method also allows him to follow his muse wherever it leads without concern for whether the ballet audience will necessarily be thinking along the same lines.

"I think it's my responsibility as an artist to not care about what the audience is going to take with them," Elo shrugged. "I think I should research what I like and what is interesting to me, together with the dancers, and hope we create such a rich world that we'll draw the viewer into it."

Finally, some new New Pornographers

Live music. Singer A.C. Newman discusses the long gap between releases and why his band needed to unleash some bouncy "Bruisers."

Though it's been four years since the New Pornographers' last album (2010's "Together"), lead singer A.C. Newman says it wasn't intended to seem like a long gap.

"For me, it wasn't like I was waiting around," he says. "Right around the time when we were finishing up touring on the last Pornographers record, I found out my wife was pregnant. And then my son was born in February 2012, and then I put out my solo album around the end of 2012, and then as soon as I finished that, I thought, 'All right, time to do a Pornographers record.'"

The result is "Brill Bruisers," an upbeat rocker of an album. The name comes from the Brill Building in New York, where generations of songwriters punched the clock and penned a cavalcade of hits. Carole King spent time in its hallowed halls, as did Neil Diamond.

"I've always been fascinated by the idea of a song factory," says Newman. "It's from another time."

The upbeat sound of "Brill Bruisers" was fairly intentional (it's nearly impossible not to bob your head along to the swelling beats of the title track).

"My last solo record was down tempo. It was very consciously sad, with a certain type of singer/songwriter low-key vibe," says Newman about "Shut Down the Streets." "Once I got that out of my system, I thought, 'It would be great to make a really upbeat record.'"

As the band heads into their 15th year, and the members find solo success (particularly Neko Case, who Newman says is the hardest to schedule around), the question arises of what the future holds for them. Not to worry, says Newman.

"There's so much music in the world to be inspired by. Any given artist touches on so little in their career. There's an endless amount of permutations. There's an endless amount of music that can be made."

Changing lives

Preparing his legacy

Newman is a new father, but he says it hasn't changed what he likes to write about.

"You find yourself being very much the same person," he says.

However: "It makes me think more of like a legacy that I'm leaving for my son. But all that doesn't make me want to be better," he explains. "It doesn't make change the way I write music. It just makes me want to be as good as possible."

The butt is no joke

#breaktheinternet. How the booty got "phat," and the skinny from Kim Kardashian's trainer.

Kim Kardashian very nearly succeeded in her mission to #breaktheinternet last week after posting her upcoming Paper magazine cover photo that left nothing to the imagination about her famous derriere. The world likes big butts and it cannot lie — Sir Mix-A-Lot just said what people everywhere have been thinking for centuries with "Baby Got Back," the '90s anthem that ushered in the era of booty worship in popular culture.

Shaking it — whether like a Polaroid picture or twerking — reached another level when Beyonce rightly questioned whether we were "ready for this jelly" in her song "Bootylicious." More recently, Jennifer Lopez, famed for her curves, is paying homage to the heinie in her latest song, "Booty," with a video featuring over four minutes of shameless booty-shaking and butt-bouncing with rapper Iggy Azalea. Nicki Minaj also recently made waves with her sexually explicit track and video "Anaconda," which includes the lyrics "Oh my gosh, look at her butt," showing a squatting Minaj in just a bustier and thong.

Curvaceous icons date back centuries, but booties didn't get much attention in the West until the Renaissance, when artists like Rubens and Rembrandt typified the Grand Baroque style with paintings of voluptuous women, says Bernard Andrieu, cultural historian of the body at the University of Rouen, France.

But while the audience sits back and enjoys all that hypnotic butt-shaking, performers know that working that booty is hard work. Big butts are pert — and Kardashian is fielding her share of theories from plastic surgeons that she had the help of a Brazilian butt lift to get it so prominent. But one thing is for sure: They can't be achieved by eating dessert.

"You might be able to work on it, but mostly it comes from a genetic background, bringing new standards for the rest of womanhood," Andrieu says.

How to sculpt your booty

While there's no way of feeding the junk in your trunk, you can put your "back" into some of the moves that make for a cover-worthy booty. We got the basics of Kardashian's routine from Joel Bourairma, her personal coach at L'Usine in Paris.

Get on all fours. Extend one leg toward the ceiling, keeping your back straight. Hold for 30 seconds. As it gets easier, try to hold it for a minute on each leg. For better results, use an exercise rubber band or ankle weights. If you just push the leg without extending it, you will work on the back of your thighs, which helps create the curve between the leg and the butt.

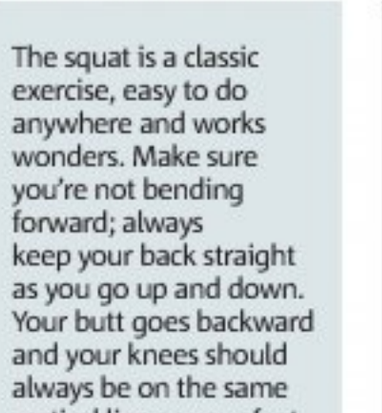
Get on your side, using your elbow for balance. Raise and lower your leg in a scissor movement. Remember: Keep your foot turned toward the ground. Depending on the position of your leg, you work on the back of the bum (raised leg pushed a bit backward), the side (leg in line with the body) and the top of the thigh (leg pushed a bit forward).

The squat is a classic exercise, easy to do anywhere and works wonders. Make sure you're not bending forward; always keep your back straight as you go up and down. Your butt goes backward and your knees should always be on the same vertical line as your feet. Repeat for 30 seconds, then try 1 minute. To really accentuate the effect and develop the posterior, use a workout bar and add some weight, but keep it under 15 squats.



By making your waist skinnier, you can give the impression that your butt is bigger — which Kardashian used to great effect on the Paper cover. To make your waist thinner, do a side plank and hold it for 30 seconds to 1 minute. You can add some weights to make it harder and more efficient. For an even tighter sculpt, sit on one side of your bum and try to touch your feet with your hands, while pushing your legs up. Repeat until you feel the burn!

How to spend the holidays away from home

Thanksgiving is just around the corner, and for many college students it is simply too expensive to head home for the long weekend — which means that they will probably be spending the holiday with the family of a local friend.

For students who've never spent Thanksgiving away from home before, it can be difficult to know exactly what's expected of them. "I think there is an urge when you are young to think that you are just visiting your friend, rather than their family," says etiquette blogger Victoria Pratt.

Along with her friend and colleague Jaya Saxena, Pratt is the co-founder of Uncommon Courtesy, a blog that tackles the modern-day etiquette problems many Millennials face. We talked to the duo about how to students can gracefully survive Thanksgiving in someone else's home.

Never forget that you are a guest. "It's just making sure you clean up after yourself," says Saxena. "Make sure that you pitch in. Be aware that other families do things differently."

Avoid controversial conversation topics. "Don't feel super shy with somebody that's being terrible and racist," says Pratt. While you cannot react the same way that you would if you were in your own home, you can deflect the conversation. "You're in school, so you can always start talking about your major," Pratt suggests.

There's also always the option of walking away. "You can excuse yourself," says Saxena. "You have to balance being a guest with your commitment to social justice," she adds with a laugh.

In his ruling, the judge cited a New Jersey legal precedent that stated that divorced parents may be required to pay for their children's college expenses.

Ricci's parents told WPVI that they were willing to pay New Jersey in-state tuition, but that their daughter chose to go to Temple.

DEVELOP YOUR HARD SKILLS

Over the years, I've pushed all of you to become subject matter experts because that's what companies are searching for. Hard skills, such as being able to program in certain computer languages, are measurable and in high demand.

In a new study commissioned by my company, in partnership with ElanceoDesk.com, we found that HR professionals focus more on hard skills when hiring than soft skills (like attitude or personality). Fifty-five percent said they focused more on hard skills while 21 percent focused on soft skills. Here are some tips for developing your hard skills so you can compete:

Jobs Advice

DAN SCHAWBEL

DANSCHAWBEL.COM

Dan Schawbel is a workplace expert, keynote speaker, and author of the New York Times best-selling book, "Promote Yourself: The New Rules For Career Success."

1 Identify the skills you need. Based on your interests and the types of jobs you're applying to, you should come up with a list of skills that are required. Look at the job descriptions for the ones you want to apply to and see what skills they all require and have in common. For example, if you're interested in being a financial analyst, you'll need to be able to evaluate the quality of securities, be proficient in financial analysis and spreadsheet software, and have a good working knowledge of finance and accounting.

2 Focus on the most important skill first. You don't have much time when you're hunting for a job or preparing for a career transition, so focus on the most important skill first — the one that is mandatory and the one that you could use as a competitive advantage if it matches up to your strengths.

3 Take virtual or in-person classes. Once you know what skills you need, start enrolling in classes so that you can learn them first-hand. Check your local colleges for classes. There are also online learning courses that you can take for free or low cost. SkillShare.com and Udemy.com are community education marketplaces where you can learn from subject matter experts. Coursera.org is similar to the other two, but offers free courses from more than thirty colleges and universities.

4 Practice your skills repeatedly. Use these new skills at your job or take on freelance projects where you can practice them, plus gain a record of success and references for future work. It takes at least 10,000 hours to master a skill but when you do, you become much more valuable to your company and in your industry. The more you practice your skillsthe better you will naturally get over time with practice.

CHEMISTRY
ISN'T ALWAYS ENOUGH

The truth is, medications like Viagra®, Cialis®, and Levitra® don't work for all men in treating erectile dysfunction (ED).[1-3] If you aren't getting the results you seek, maybe it's time to discover a satisfying treatment that may help put the sizzle back into your sex life![4]

Assets or liabilities?

Re: 'Can Kim Kardashian #breaktheinternet?' (Metro, Oct. 13) I HAD to relay my feelings as being VERY pissed off because as I turned the pages of your paper, I saw Kim Kardashian's bare ass as part of my morning commute — without any type of warning — without any type of censorship. Why is your publication jumping on the bandwagon to assault the eyes and minds of those who aren't the least bit interested in this woman and what she is offering? There is nothing tasteful nor useful about her or her "manufactured assets" in photos. Not everyone is obsessed with sex or sex appeal.
JEWEL, VIA EMAIL

An issue both parties back

According to a recent poll in Time magazine, over 80 percent of conservatives backed net neutrality! That's because they see past the Republican talking points (the "government takeover" malarkey) and realize that they have to be able to trust their ISPs to not censor what they read or play favorites depending on corporate whim. Net neutrality isn't about the government taking over the Internet, or even regulating what people can say. It's about preventing corporations from doing that.

Packers slam Birds

NFL. Aaron Rodgers shredded the Eagles, 53-20, in Green Bay.

Randall Cobb and the Packers plowed over the Eagles on Sunday. / GETTY IMAGES

It was the first time all season that the Eagles looked futile. Prior to Sunday's blowout loss, the Eagles only defeats came in winnable games. Philly had absolutely no shot at winning this one. The offense couldn't sustain a drive, the defense couldn't figure out how to slow down Aaron Rodgers and his potent receivers and, as a result, the Birds came back to Earth in the frozen tundra of Green Bay in a 53-20 loss.

Unable to combine a pattern of pressure on Rodgers in the pocket and adequate coverage on Packers' receivers Jordy Nelson and Randall Cobb, the Birds were burned in one way or another for a season-high 53 points (the most points allowed by Philly since 1972).

In the embarrassing setback, the Birds let Rodgers pretty much let loose. The MVP candidate threw for 341 yards and three touchdowns.

Though his numbers weren't terrible, 26-for-44 for 346 yards, Mark Sanchez found himself battling from large deficits and the quarterback was responsible for three turnovers (two interceptions).

The Birds shot themselves in the foot in with turnovers — they had four, all leading to points. A LeSean McCoy fumble and Sanchez pick-six to Julius Peppers put the Eagles in a pretty deep hole. Sanchez threw a second interception at the beginning of the fourth quarter and lost a fumble that Green Bay easily scored a touchdown on.

The Birds did climb back with an 80-yard, 10-play drive, putting the Eagles in the end zone for the first time after Jordan Matthews caught a 10-yard touchdown pass. But by that time, they trailed 39-13.

Short memories

The Eagles will need to forget their Green Bay disaster quickly.

- Philly has a cupcake home game against the Titans this coming Sunday at 1 p.m..
- The stretch from hell begins as the Birds travel to face Dallas on Thanksgiving Day.
- After two games in five days, the Eagles host the Super Bowl champion Seahawks in Week 14 and the Cowboys again in Week 15.

Around the league

Chiefs run wild on Seahawks

Most should have realized the Chiefs (7-3) were for real when they blasted the Patriots in late September, but Kansas City cemented itself as a contender Sunday at home by edging the defending Super Bowl champs, 24-20. Jamaal Charles ran for 159 yards and a pair of touchdowns while the Chiefs defense kept Marshawn Lynch out of the end zone despite his 124 yards on the ground.

Bears 21, Vikings 13
The Bears (4-6) broke out of a major funk against the Vikings (4-6) on Sunday as Jay Cutler tossed three touchdowns and racked up 330 yards through the air at Soldier Field. Alshon Jeffery was Cutler's favorite target as he hauled in 135 yards of receiving.

Falcons 19, Panthers 17
With a win in Charlotte over the spiraling Panthers, the Falcons seized a tie for first place in the NFC South. Matt Ryan had a touchdown toss and Matt Bryant kicked four field goals. Atlanta would need every one of the field goals as the Panthers missed twice, once with 1:27 left and once as time expired.

Bengals 27, Saints 10
Andy Dalton had a career day efficiency-wise, completing 73 percent of his passes and throwing for three touchdowns in the Bengals' sixth win of the year. A.J. Green had a big day, collecting 127 yards and Jeremy Hill filled in admirably for the injured Giovani Bernard, picking up 152 yards on the ground.

Knile Davis and the Chiefs dumped Seattle. / GETTY IMAGES

Bucs 27, Redskins 7
Mike Evans made a "rookie of the year"-like statement Sunday with a 209 yard day for the Bucs. Evans caught seven passes, two of them for touchdowns.

Rams 22, Broncos 7
Shaun Hill threw for 220 yards and a touchdown as the Rams upset the Broncos. Kenny Britt caught four of Hill's passes for 128 yards. Peyton Manning threw for 389 yards but Denver had trouble finding the end zone as it didn't score in the second half in St. Louis.

49ers 16, Giants 10
The Niners picked off Eli Manning five times in what would wind up as New York's fifth straight loss.

Texans 23, Browns 7
J.J. Watt had a sack, a forced fumble, three tackles for a loss (five total) and, oh yeah, he caught a touchdown pass from Ryan Mallett. EVAN MACY

Canseco says his finger 'fell off'

Former American League MVP Jose Canseco says that his surgically re-attached finger fell off during a game of poker last week. "My finger should have been amputated from the beginning," Canseco tweeted. "It was very loose with no bone to connect it. It was also smelling really bad." The former A's, Rangers, Red Sox, Blue Jays, Rays and Yankees slugger shot himself in the hand with a gun last month.

NHL power rankings | by Rich Slate

No. 1

Habs (13-4-1)

The Canadiens are riding the longest current win streak (five games) in the NHL and also have the most points (27). They crushed the Bruins, 5-1, last Thursday and will be at TD Garden this Saturday for an anticipated rematch.

No. 2

Penguins (12-3-1)

The Penguins have the best goal-differential (plus-25) in the NHL. They are 9-1-0 in their last 10 games. But signing goaltender Marc-Andre Fleury to a four-year extension? That's putting way too much faith in a guy who typically crumbles come playoff time.

No. 3

Lightning (12-4-2)

Top to bottom, the Western Conference is superior to the East, but it's tough to argue with the Habs, Penguins and Lightning thus far. The Lightning have scored the most goals (66) in the NHL and they have the second best goal differential (plus-18).

No. 4

Blues (12-4-1)

We helped create the Blues bandwagon last season and where did that get us? The lesson learned is to not fully trust a team until they've done something in the postseason. Their upcoming road trip is tough, starting with a game at Boston.

No. 5

Ducks (11-3-4)

At full strength, the Ducks might very well be the best team in the NHL. However, it's been a bizarre few weeks for Anaheim, starting with Corey Perry and Francois Beauchemin getting diagnosed with the mumps. They split a home-and-home with L.A. last week.

No. 6

Predators (11-4-2)

One of the under-the-radar teams in the NHL. If the playoffs began today, they'd be the third seed in the West. James Neal, who has nine goals, five assists and is plus-10 on the year, is proving that he was more than just Sidney Crosby's goon sidekick in Pittsburgh.

No. 7

Flames (11-6-2)

It's highly doubtful that Calgary will be the seventh best team in the league in a month or two. But its résumé so far is kind of impressive. The Flames have scored the most goals, 59, in the Western Conference in 2014-15.

No. 8

Canucks (12-6-0)

Another Canadian team off to a surprisingly good start, you can't ignore the fact that Vancouver's goal-differential is plus-1. The Canucks are 7-3-0 in their last 10 games but it is hard to explain their 5-0 no-show loss at Arizona on Friday. They host Anaheim this week.

No. 9

Kings (9-5-4)

If there is any team in the NHL to not judge too harshly in the regular season it has to be the Kings, based on their two Stanley Cups in the past three years. With the emergence of Calgary and Vancouver, the NHL's toughest division is even harder to navigate.

No. 10

Islanders (11-6-0)

The Islanders are proving to have some staying power after their great start. Other than Pittsburgh you can reasonably make the case that they could finish ahead of anyone in the marshmallow-soft Metropolitan division.

No. 11

Bruins (11-8-0)

You can't say that the B's really deserve to be this high, but then you look around at the other pretenders in this range. Boston enjoyed a long homestand with a five-game win streak but went on the road against Toronto and Montreal and got waxed.

Flyers' momentum falters

NHL. Early-season break comes at a bad time for Philadelphia.

The Flyers players or coach Craig Berube would never admit it, but the six-day break between games last week came at the worst possible point of the schedule so far this season.

Just when it seemed like they were getting their act together — on the heels of a three-game winning streak — almost an entire week slogged by before the Flyers played another game.

After beating the Colorado Avalanche on Nov. 8, the Flyers were off until the Blue Jackets arrived on Nov. 14.

Sure, they practiced, and even held some physical and challenging practices, but none of it can simulate game-speed. The Flyers were a step too slow and far from sharp handling and shooting the puck against Columbus — especially in the first period.

Jakub Voracek, No. 93 of the Philadelphia Flyers, skates off the ice as the Columbus Blue Jackets celebrate their win on Friday.

Quoted

"We want to be a good team, and we have high expectations, and it's not acceptable even when you have five days off or not [in between games]. You still have to manage to put out a good effort and get two points."
Mark Streit

Points for forward Jakub Voracek, most in the NHL through Sunday.

And sure, they said all the right things about getting off to a good start and not losing any momentum in the days leading up to their return to the ice. Their bodies just failed to back it up and the Flyers allowed three power play goals and lost, 4-3, to a squad that hadn't won in nine games.

"I don't think it was a great effort," goalie Steve Mason said. "We needed to be better. I just don't think we had the urgency that they did."

It was there 24 hours later when the team traveled to face the Eastern Conference leading Canadiens, but a pair of power-play goals from Montreal in the first period put the Flyers in a quick hole. They got within a goal twice but the Canadiens added another power-play goal and the Flyers ended up pointless for the weekend with a 6-3 loss.

Still, the Flyers were quick not to point to the layoff as an excuse — even though it likely played a vital role in the weekend woes.

"We want to be a good team, and we have high expectations, and it's not acceptable even when you have five days off or not [in between games]," Mark Streit said. "You still have to manage to put out a good effort and get two points."

Obviously, the Flyers need to find their mojo — and ability to kill off penalties — again. However, it will be hard to locate at Madison Square Garden, which has been a house of horrors the past couple of seasons. They face the Rangers — after a three-day break — on Wednesday.

Maybe this break arrives at a welcome point of the season and will help spark the Flyers instead of derail them.
